HONGKONG, TUESDAY, JULY 7, 1868.

THE GAOL. THE criminal trial of yesterday, in which the gaol warders charged with manslaughter of an Indian prisoner were acquitted, will nevertheless we hope have important results. We are not about to criticise the verdict rendered in this particular case, but it is impossible to refrain from strong comment on the de-venting their recurrence. posed to invidious criticism upon matters beyond his jurisdiction. But we may fairly assume that the attention of the government having been directed to this point, immediate directions will be given to assimilate the practice to that pursued in our convict, gaols at home.

It is however to another department that the evidence given yesterday will probably attract the most attention. A Chinese convict called as a witness deposed that he "was afraid to speak be cause the other turnkeys would beat him." When re-assured of protection he reiterated that "he would not dare to speak the truth, as many things could be done to him while on the works. did not speak the whole truth before the Coroner, and he refused now." A state ment such as this from so generally garru lous a witness as a Chinaman, when unbiassed by fear, throws a grave suspicion upon the general conduct of the gaol turnkeys. It may be totally unfounded on fact, but, true or false, demands strict investigation. The statement was made in open Court before a number of his countrymen, and the natural impression produced would be that our gaol system approximated to that of China; and the belief would as naturally follow that the converse proposition held good, and that bribery would be as effective in mitigation of punishment as adverse testimony would tend towards its increase. We have greater fear for the contempt into which such a statement would bring our prison administration, than for any impression might produce of undue harshness. are perfectly aware that no suspicion can attach to the Governor of the Gaol, whose humanity is beyond suspicion, and we are much mistaken if that official would not be the first to suggest, and press for, a searching examination. But we have reason to believe that he is unable to to them fifteen preceding years of residence obtain trustworthy men for the wages given to Turnkeys-sums sounding well when converted into £. s. d., but inadequate to the maintenance of respectable men when disbursed in a Colony where stating thus much we do not desire to have the dollar scarce exceeds the shilling at it inferred that with the quarter commenc-

Turning from these general considerations to the case which has given rise to them, we would add that, accepting the verdict given in the case of the accused warders as founded upon justice, we may yet be permitted to enquire whether work on the paper until we see the com-

there is no medium between punishment for manslaughter and absolute escape from the consequences of what the learned counsel for the defence termed possibly reprehensible conduct "in beating too severely?" We are not amongst those who think that prison life should be made more preferable to the natives than freedom and semi-stacvation. But the assumption of excessive power and of the right to inflict punishment on the part of very subordinate gaol employés should be checked with a strong hand, and we trust that immediate measures will be taken to that end, as well as to inflict some lesser nunishment on the accused, who most undoubtedly exceeded their powers, as shewn by the evidence already given. The use of the rattan has, we hear, been abolished since the death of the deceased Indian. But there are other means of inflicting pain than by the use of a rattan, and the possibly true declaration of the Chinese witness before referred to, points to this fact.

MR. BURLINGAME IN

CALIFORNIA. MR BURLINGAME'S first speech at San Francisco appears to have given much satisfaction to the audience to whom it was addressed, dealing as it did with those generalities which any one desirous of making capital out of foreign relations with China, finds it so easy to enunciate. The pith of it, we imagine, lies in the following paragraph :---

I will not speak at length to-night of its (the mission's) purposes. I must reserve myself for questions as they arise; but this l will say, Mr Chairman and gentlemen, that this mission means progress. ["Hear hear," and applause.] It means that China desires to come into warmer and more intimate relations with the West. It means hat she desires to come under the obligations of that international law of which you. sir, [General Halleck] are one of the ablest exponents, to the end that she may enjoy the advantages of that law. It means that China, conscious of her own integrity, wishes to have her questions stated—that she is willing to submit her questions to the general judgment of mankind. It means that she intends to come into the brotherhood of nations. It means commerce : it means peace : it means a unification in its own interest of the whole human

This is very nice talking and would be worth a good deal in evidence of the fects of a system which has rendered the progress of China, were there not a few trial, and acquittal, of the prisoners post reasons for misdoubting, not the sentisible. It appears that Inspector Grimes, under natructions from his superiors, took out summonses against Messrs Smith, Archer & Co., Mr Walter Notley and others for having dared to fire off certain fireworks on the Praya East on the night of the 4th of July, in celebration of the independence declared by the American States in 1776. The defendants appeared before Mr Goodlake at the Magistracy this morning, when that worthy occupant of the Bench found it somewhat hard to preserve that gravity commonly ascribed to the administrators of justice. His Worship said that he had seen many demonstrations on the 4th of July all over the world, and he failed to perceive much harm in them. There seemed to have been no damage done, and as defendants had been put to considerable inconvenience in attending the Court, he good-humoredly discharged them. THE Friend of China dated 30th June, contains the following paragraph:— Ourselves-With to-day's number of the Friend of China we complete our Eighteenth year as Proprietor and Editor of the Journal, -the only newspaper we ever had connection with and most likely the last. Our object in purchasing the property in 1850 was to gratify a desire to keep before the public the mal-practices of certain officials in Hongkong, and, at times, following out this object, we have obtained for Hongkong an amount of attention at the hands of those Secretaries of State who followed Earl Grey in office, which the Colony otherwise never would have had. Eighteen years of incessant work have had their effect, however; and when we add in this trying country, readers will require little to induce them to believe in the prudence of our medical adviser's suggestion; viz., that we drop the Editorial pen and seek repose out of China for a while. In ing to-morrow we cease from work on the "Friend" altogether -but we desire it to be understood that before the year is over we hope to be able to effect a sale of "the Institution" and a transfer of the Editorial mantle to other shoulders. If possible we shall remain in the North of China and > EXTORTION. The charges of extortion against Edward Lawrence, ex-inspector of buildings, was then proceeded with—that in which Lo Acheong was concerned being taken first. The facts of the case are almost precisely similar to those in the case previously reported, the alleged money extorted, or bribe received, being extorted or received in consideration of certain alterations in some houses in course of construction in Mercer Street: $35 is alleged to have been paid in this instance, to the receipt or extortion of which sum defendant pleaded not guilty Mr Hayllar, instructed by Mr Gaskell, appeared for the prisoner.

Lo Acheong, Silkman in Jervois Street and Lo Aling, a contractor, were the only witnesses for the prosecution whose evidence bore upon the payment of the al eged sum

Mr Hayllar addressed the Jury on behal of the defendant. He said that the most skilfully-got-up defence in such a case could consist of nothing beyond a review of the discrepancies in the prosecutor's evidence. as they could not contradict the statement made by the prosecutor's witnesses. There was, however, not the slightest doubt but an animus existed in the minds of the Chinese, who were doubtless very much annoved at the steps taken by the Inspector of Nuisances to enforce the requirements of the new ordinance regulating the construction of buildings in this Colony. Refer ring to the modus operandi of the service of such notices as that upon which the alleged extortion is based, the learned counsel remarked that the name of defendant did not appeariupon them at all; the form simply bore the words "the Inspector attached to the department." and Lawrence had not the least discretionary power in so arranging such matters for his own personal interest. The learned counsel remarked strongly upon the improbability of the circumstance of a man (Lo Aling) coming from Cauton and going to Lawrence, so that the latter could extort from him. Why, the only motive which took Lo Aling to the defendant was, that he might bribe the prisoner. He would produce evidence to show that the houses under question were in a rotten state, and that a reasonable motive was therefore supplied for the great desire of the complainant to settle with the defendant by bribery. Mr Hayllar here referred to the chief argument employed in the former case, viz., that the person who paid the money was a principal in the offence of extortion, and that his evidence

THE MORALITY OF GREAT MEN (Sat orday Review, May 9.)

Success in the history of the world has so often been achieved unsorupulously and used badly that cynical persons may be tempted to ask whether any great men have ever been thoroughly moral. No doubt they constantly have a conscience of their own, and conform more or less regularly to its injunctions; but what is thought is that the whole moral code of heroic personages is laxer than that which obtains among their Lilliputian contemporaries. A certain school of philosophers even become indignant with anybody who pokes too inquisitively into the privacy of the illustrious dead, to see whether or not they conformed strictly to the Ten Commandments. Surely they hint, men of genius are not to be tested by the Ten Commandments. They consider such invidious criticism as a sort of discreditable snufling about in the dirty places of the past, and the "doggeries" is a term invented by Mr Carlyle to express his disgust at the people who rake up scandals about the moral conduct of great men. It is remarkable, indeed, how very slight importance posterity attaches to certain of their failings; even where similar default on the part of the living wou d not be easiy tolerated. When men arrive at a considerable degree of eminence and power. world seems to throw aside its usual tape and measure, and to take down from the shelf exceptional standards of morality by which to judge them. Famous monarchs, statesmen, generals, and to some extent amons authors too, are dealt with on broader and larger principles than ordinary. Historians do not set themselves, to praise or condemn them according as they were faithful or unfaithful to their wives, or with reference to their veracity or any other quality which in private life is so rigidly canvassed. Anybody who reaches the position of a Napoleon, a Duke of Wellington or a Cayour, is estimated irrespectively of the cardinal virtues. The more he falls short of great notoriety, the more flercely his personal deficiencies are blamed, when we come down to those, who in station and influence are on a level ourselves, we fall back into our former moral method, and begin again to regard tomperance, soberness, and chastity as matters of primary importance. THE PRESIDENT'S IMPEACHMENT EPITOME OF OPINION IN THE MORNING ! JOURNALS.

The Standard believes the news brought by the Atlantic telegraph will be a cause of proximity of the Rebels in large numbers | night was by being drawn up to the top of | dowed forth eight months ago on landing in | rejoicing to all who value law and justice especially the Chinese shopkeepers and understand how much more valuable to the permanent welfare of a nation is the honour of its public men and the inviolability of the judicial oath than any question of policy or any party dispute. But our expression of approval must not be too confident as yet. The Senate has voted only on one charge, and that the last and weakest of the series included in the impeachment. Even if the seven who have obeyed their conscience rather than their party on this occasion should desire to act in the same manner on the next Saturday, it it by no means certain that the party pressure which is sure to be applied without stint or scruple during the intervening week may not shake the resolution of some among them. The change of a single vote would suffice to convict the President. A two-thrds vote is necessary for that purpose, and thirty-six to eighteen would form exactly the required majority. The Times says that of all the articles in the indictment that which has been rejected was at once the weakest and the most difficult to meet. It obviously involves more than one mixed question of law and fact, and is directed against the President's entire policy rather than against the acts which it specifies. It might possibly have contributed vaguely toward a general verdict of condemnation, but, taken by itself, it could not be sustained as a substative charge, and was justly ignored by the We shall now await with increased interest the sequel of a State prosecution on which the political fortunes of the United States will probably depend. Without offering any opinion on the legality of Mr Johnson's conduct, one cannot help seeing that if he is convicted there is an end to the balance of power contemplated by the founders of the American Con-

The Daily News asserts that there has been no passion in the trial, and there is no great suspense in waiting for the verdict. The nation could afford to be fair, and neither Mr. Johnson nor his accusers can comblain of the trial.

The Telegraph remarks that from a logical point of view nothing can be more unsatisfactory than the upshot of this remarkable trial. By a majority all but amounting to two-thirds, the Senate has decided that President Johnson has committed acts demanding his deposition. Yet, notwithstanding this solemn decision, the Chief Magistrate retains his rank and power. because a comparatively insignificant number of his judges dissented from the opinion of their colleagues. After the failure of the principal charge, the minor counts can scarcely be pressed, but it would be premature to speculate on the effect this event is like to have on the chances of the Presidential election. For the present one may congratulate the Americans that a man so intemperate in speech and hasty in action as Senator Wade has not been raised to the Presidency-which he would have been had Andrew Johnson been deposed. In the course of a few months a new President must be seated in the White House; and no long time will elapse before even the most vehement members of the Republican party will rejoice that the highest office in the Republic still retains its prestige unimpaired and its repute undininished The Post anticipates that the acquittal of

Mr. Johnson will secure for him the sympathies of large numbers of his fellow citizens who are otherwise opposed to his policy. He has fought the battle which was forced upon him, and has come out of the contest a victor. As for the imperchment itself, the result will probably satisfy the American people that the clause in the Constitution which permitted such a proceeding is one which ought to be expunged. It simply supplies an engine to a dominant party which may be most unscrupulously employed. From the beginning to the end of this great State prosecution one can detect nothing but evidence of blind unreasonable party feeling. The Star observes that between the preent time and the date of the next presidential election the American people and the Congress would do well to consider whether a state of the law which permits the outrageous conduct of President Johnson to pass with impunity does not ask for an immediate and a radical change. Let us make the case our own. The President, after all, has little more power-in some respects he has even less power—than an English Premier. We chafe at this moment under the unwonted, unjust, and unconstitutional spectacle of an English Premier holding office in the face of a hostile majority; but would this position, acknowledged even by l'ories to be exceptional and provisional. be tolerated for an instant if Mr Disracli. or any other statesman, were to persist in clinging to power for two or three or four years, in defiance of three-fourths of the two Houses of Parliament, and of repeated votes of want of coulidence? This is, in point of fact, the position of Mr Johnson at present. The Constitution ensures him a certain lease of power, and he takes advantage of this tenure. As long as such a thing is possible, as long as a Minister condemned by the representatives of the people can continue to hold supreme power, as long as the only means of removing such an obnoxious statesman is the cumbrous, costly, and, as we now discover, ineffective method of an impeachment, so long popular rights are not secure, and government by the people for the people is liable to be

Opinions of the Press.

(Foochow Advertiser, May 4, 1867.) We have received a copy of "Notes and Queries:" this publication will be really useful, it contains much matter relating to China which otherwise would be lost, and we wish it every success. Sinologues, Chinese antiquaries and scientific men ought especially to congratulate themselves on the appearance of "Notes and Queries,' as it will form their medium of communication and bring into notice what otherwise might have lain unknown and buried in themselves. Now that Law and Officialism have got their Gazette, Science and Philology their Notes and Queries, and Missionaries their Recorder, the various divisions of mental thought and work in this land ought to be well taken care of; for our part we are glad to see these several issues, both on accountof the information and instruction they afford, and the index they supply to the mental vigour of the foreign community in this land (Foochow Missionary Recorder, April, 1867.) The two first numbers of Notes & Queries on China and Japan have been placed on our table. The magazine is every way creditable to its editor and publishers, and we cannot but wish them the utmost success in their efforts to fill an important and hitherto noccupied place in Eastern liter-

We have received the first number of a neat little pamphlet of eight pages entitled "Notes and Queries on China and Japan," containing some able and interesting historical papers on China, together with THE Undersigned having been appointed notes and numerous queries for future contributors to answer, and states that the number of its pages will depend upon the number and length of its contributions. The work will be received with eagerness by literary men, as throwing light upon the ancient traditions of China, with researches into the laws of the various provinces, and the custom of the people. San Francisco News Letter, Mar. 23, 1867. We have received the first number, which is full of curious, out-of-the-way, and interesting matter. (Shanghai Recorder, May 17, 1867.)

We are put in possession of the fourth number of "Notes and Queries on China and Japan."
